RHODE ISLAND STATE
COUNCIL ON THE ARTS

2024 ANNUAL REPORT

Our Mission

Through grantmaking, programming, convening, policy-building and education, the Rhode Island State Council on the Arts ensures that arts and culture will play an ever more significant part in the well-being and experience of all Rhode Island residents.

Dear Friends,

Arts and culture are embedded in every community and contribute to their livability and economic vitality. As you will discover in this annual report, we are stewards of Rhode Island's thriving arts and culture sector through innovative workshops, convenings, programming and grants.

In FY24, RISCA proudly distributed 277 grants. Our grants, which total more than $1.12 million, support projects by arts educators, artists and artist small businesses, folk and traditional artists, organizations and health professionals.

We understand that arts and culture are a critical component in the development of successful communities:

- Arts and culture promote economic development. According to the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis, in 2022, the arts sector represented 3.25 percent of Rhode Island's GDP supporting more than 18,000 jobs. Our artist small businesses are a substantive component of that economic impact.
- Arts and culture drive local tourism and have a ripple effect on neighboring businesses. According to the 2022 National Arts and Economic Prosperity 6 Study, event attendees on average spent $38 in their communities in addition to event admission at restaurants, shops and other local businesses, leading to more prosperous main streets and downtowns.
- An 11-year study in the Boston Public Schools, by EdVestors, recently reported that during a full school year, each student enrolled in an arts course had an increase of one-third of a day in attendance. This translates to nine additional days of instruction and finds that arts education can lead to improved academic performance.

As we move forward, we remain committed to ensuring that arts and culture are accessible to all Rhode Islanders. We will continue to inspire creativity and uplift our communities via the transformative power of the arts.

Please enjoy our annual report, which tells our story of impact, commitment, support and contribution to our state's economy, the arts and culture ecosystem and improving lives.

Respectfully,

Lawrence Purtill
Council Chair

Film and TV Office

Rhode Island's film industry had an exciting year. The star-studded Ella McCay, written and directed by James L. Brooks and featuring Jamie Lee Curtis, Woody Harrelson and Emma Mackey filmed throughout the state, drawing significant attention.

- The newportFILM's summer series was a major success, attracting thousands to screenings at venues like The Elms and Rosecliff.
- Chosen Family, co-starring Heather Graham and Julia Stiles, screened at the Greenwich Odeum during the Rhode Island International Film Festival.
- In November, the Emmy-winning HBO series The Gilded Age wrapped its third season in Newport, capping off a year of notable productions in the state.
- We congratulate Executive Director Steven Feinberg for his induction into the Cranston Hall of Fame.
- We thank the Governor, Executive Branch and Legislature for their tremendous support of our talented cast, crew and local vendors in the film community.

Left, a 20th Century Studios crew shoots a scene on the steps of the State House for Ella McCay. The film follows an idealistic young politician who juggles familial issues and a challenging work life while preparing to take over the job of her mentor, the state's longtime incumbent governor.

POETRY OUT LOUD

With the recitation of the poem, Say Grace, by Emily Jungmin Yoon, Jennifer Shon, a junior at Portsmouth Abbey School, won the 19th annual Poetry Out Loud Rhode Island competition. As the state's champion, she went on to compete in the national and regional finals in Washington, D.C. There, she netted a first-place win in a companion competition, Poetry Ourselves, with her original poem, My Hanbando. Photo: James Kegley.

Arts Education

Grants in Education provide project-specific support to schools, nonprofit organizations, arts educators and teaching artists to engage students in rich and meaningful artistic experiences in dedicated learning environments. The grants are experiential and focus on the exploration of art and the artistic process. Our arts education grants strive to build the capacity of local teaching artists and nonprofit organizations, while offering students high-quality artistic learning experiences. This program prioritizes projects from Pre-K to twelfth grade students.

Funding for School Arts and Culture Field Trips 2023-24

58 field trips

5,044 students served

$28,000 awarded

Our Big Yellow School Bus program supports funding for schools planning an in-person field trip with an arts and cultural organization, an artist or a group of artists.

Arts Education

Our work in arts education provides support to schools, nonprofit organizations, arts educators and teaching artists in addition to fostering our close relationship with R.I.'s Department of Education (RIDE).

Annually, we celebrate March as Arts in the Schools Month and bring arts educators and their students to the State House to perform, meet and greet legislators. The halls are filled with student musicians, actors, singers and dancers. In addition, resolutions are read into the record on the floor of the Senate and the House.

This year, in partnership with RIDE, arts education legislation passed both chambers of our General Assembly and went into effect immediately following passage. The law helps Rhode Islanders learn more about the availability and participation of arts education in public middle and high schools. It asks for annual reports from the schools on students enrolled in arts education courses.

In May, Senator Hanna Gallo, standing at the podium, and Representative Lauren Carson, and Trinity Repertory Co.'s Artistic Director, Curt Columbus, seated, from left to right, participated in the Arts Day celebration. In March, Sen. Gallo and Rep. Carson hosted Arts in the Schools Month where arts students performed.

Students perform for legislators, parents and teachers during Arts in the Schools Day at the State House.

Teaching Artist Roster

Through our partnership with the New England Foundation for the Arts (NEFA), we list our panel-approved teaching artists on NEFA's CreativeGround, a directory featuring profiles of the region's creatives. Our Roster is widely used as a public resource for educators and individuals looking to engage an artist for arts learning, residencies or projects. Currently, there are nearly 90 R.I. arts educators listed. In 2024, we added the following:

Beth Adoette, Pawtucket
Sarah Ashley, Cranston
Carolina Briones, Cranston
Tamara Diaz, Providence
Julia Gandrud, Providence
Brooke Erin Goldstein, North Providence

Katie Gui, Providence
Karen Isenberg, Providence
Steven Knapp, Providence
Nada Samih-Rotondo, Providence

Folk and Traditional Arts

Community, family-based artistic practices embrace heritage

FY24 Fellowship Recipient

Nader Molina Figueroa

Figueroa, a Colombian folk dancer and choreographer and the Executive and Artistic Director of Rhode Island Folk and Cultural Association (RAÍCES), Pawtucket, continued his artistic journey of preserving the cultural roots of Colombian traditions during his fellowship.

Recipients of this grant, demonstrate the highest level of accomplishment in their craft. Additionally, RAÍCES became part of the Rhode Island Expansion Arts Program cohort in 2023.

"RAÍCES has become a hub for the community to attend cultural events, meetings, practices and performances." —Figueroa

FY24 Apprenticeship Recipient

Jason and Isaiah Roseman

Roseman, a second-generation builder, tuner and educator for the steel hand pan drum, mentored his son, Isaiah, on learning and building the Trinidad Steel Pan Drum.

During the apprenticeship, which is designed to foster and share traditional (folk) artistic skills, Isaiah, in addition to learning the instrument and performance skills, studied the history and development of the musical instrument.

Roseman is the proud holder of degrees in music and a master's in operations management.

"Seeing Isaiah develop hands-on skills, insight and the creative process that's involved with our traditional art form was tremendously rewarding." —Roseman

Atrium Gallery at One Capitol Hill

Among the exhibitions hosted this year were works by Monique Rolle-Johnson, right, who featured mixed-media paintings on wood and canvas. Additionally, members of Art Connection of R.I. displayed acrylic and oil paintings, mixed media and collages, photographs, prints and monotypes in the Atrium.

In Memoriam

Our arts community continues to mourn the loss of the wonderful and talented Angel Beth Smith, left, whose weavings and drawings inspired by nature were displayed in the Atrium Gallery. Angel played many instruments and studied music theory at Brown. She earned a Bachelor of Fine Arts with a concentration in Textile Design from RISD.

During her long and illustrious work as an artist, she was the recipient of many awards including the prestigious Princess Red Wing Award by the Tomaquag Museum, Exeter. She had many solo shows including the Indigenous Peoples Project: The Mashantucket (Western) Pequot Women at the Mashantucket Pequot Museum and Research Center, in addition to several displays at prestigious venues throughout Southern New England and beyond.

Airport Galleries

Through a partnership with Rhode Island Airport Corporation, we oversee exhibits at two galleries, which promote outstanding work by artists living and working in Rhode Island.

Cultural Facilities

Teatro ECAS, Providence/Grant Amount: $204,429 From the grantee's final report

With generous support from the State Cultural Facilities Grant Program in 2021, Teatro ECAS, New England's largest professional Spanish language theater company, has doubled in size and capacity.

"With the grant, we were able to renovate the main indoor space of an abandoned nightclub at 679 Valley St., Providence. Work began on the theatre in 2022 and wrapped up in six months. More than 65 construction jobs were supported during the build, 63 percent by Minority Business Enterprises and 8 percent with Women Business Enterprises."

"The project changed the trajectory of the 27-year-old theater company by professionalizing its facility and adding three new full-time and 14 part-time permanent positions." — Yvonne Beauregard, General Manager

Cultural Facilities

From the final report for the Cape Verdean Museum, Pawtucket, grant amount: $100,000, the museum tells us that because of the grant it has tripled its space and no longer needs to rent a storage facility. The museum is now large enough that it can receive visits from entire classes. Additionally, the Government of Cape Verde recognized the museum as the first of its kind in the world.

"Arts and culture programs bring audiences to town and city centers stimulating economic activity for nearby businesses. Grantees report growth and expansion of programs and services."—Gov. McKee

On election night 2024, the $10 million Cultural Arts and the Economy Grant ballot measure received a resounding "yes" from R.I. voters. By adding it to the ballot, Governor McKee, House Speaker Shekarchi, Senate President Ruggiero, the legislation's sponsors and all the members of the General Assembly recognized how important arts and culture are to our economy and the vitality of our communities.

The measure authorized the state to issue bonds of $10 million to support arts and cultural facilities, including $2 million each to three named organizations, Trinity Repertory, Providence; Tomaquag Museum, Exeter; and Newport Contemporary Ballet, Newport; and $4 million to our State Cultural Facilities Grant Program and RISCA's expense in administering the program. Through its matching requirements, the program stimulates broader support and participation in cultural facility projects statewide. The results have been critical repairs, upgrades and renovations to facilities used by cultural organizations.

Outcomes reported by 2014-2021 grantees

Built capacity and provided critical maintenance.

Made buildings accessible to everyone.

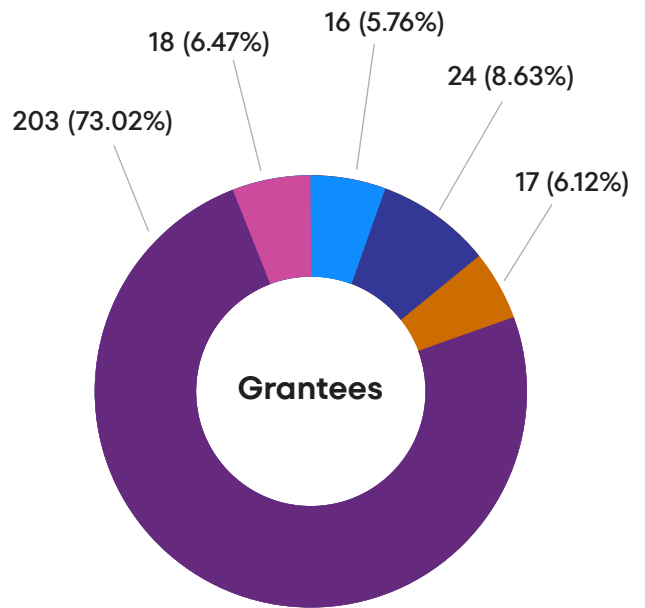

Brought buildings into compliance with updated fire codes.

Improved energy efficiency in historic sites and venues.

Enlarged spaces and programming capacities.

Artists

Pictured above are the three recipients of a multi-year grant focused on longer term artistic and business growth.

Edwige Charlot, a French born Haitian immigrant artist and designer, uses nature motifs to question, reflect and represent the relationship among people, land and culture. Charlot employs installations, sculptures, crafts, collages and prints to present a visual lexical language. A graduate of Maine College of Art and Design with a BFA in printmaking, Charlot's work has been exhibited in New England, New Jersey, New York and most recently at the New England Triennial 2022.

Aleksandra "Sasha" Azbel is the founder and creative director of a textile art and design company, specializing in sustainable textile products using local materials and dyes derived from nature. An immigrant from Kazakhstan, Azbel studied architecture at Texas A&M and RISD, and teaches in the architecture department at Roger Williams University. Azbel believes having a connection to nature brings us a sense of completeness, belonging and beauty.

Bob Dilworth, a nationally and internationally recognized artist, who has exhibited all over the world. Dilworth paints on canvas, and his artworks are showcased in corporate and private collections, including the Chicago library system and public institutions such as the RISD Museum and the Newport Art Museum. Dilworth earned a Master of Fine Arts from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and a Bachelor of Fine Arts from the prestigious Rhode Island School of Design.

FY24 Artists Grants

In addition to professional development, artist-specific business training and technical assistance, we granted directly to our state's artists in a broad range of disciplines.

We recognized the importance of artists as small businesses and community connectors.

Nationally, other state arts agencies grant 4.8 percent of their total grant dollars to artists. This fiscal year, RISCA granted 15 percent, nearly three times the national average.

Arts and Health

The arts enhance health and quality of life throughout life stages and communities. Benefits of integrating arts and culture in public health are:

- Providing direct health benefits throughout all life stages.
- Increasing health service equity and access.
- Creating safe, inclusive and engaging environments.
- Supporting social, cultural and policy change and help reduce healthcare costs.
- Enriching research methods and practices.
- Strengthening health communication.

In our grant programs, the Arts and Health grants fund non-clinical arts engagements that promote and facilitate individual health, well-being and public-health activities. All provide a community health benefit.

“ Many of us come to understand our traumas through our reiterative writing and sharing of them. There’s often a lot of shame around telling these stories. Seeing them received with care and having others see our humanity, not despite these stories, but within them dissolves that shame. ”

—Participant at LitArts RI’s Cultivating Care through Restorative Narratives

Organizations

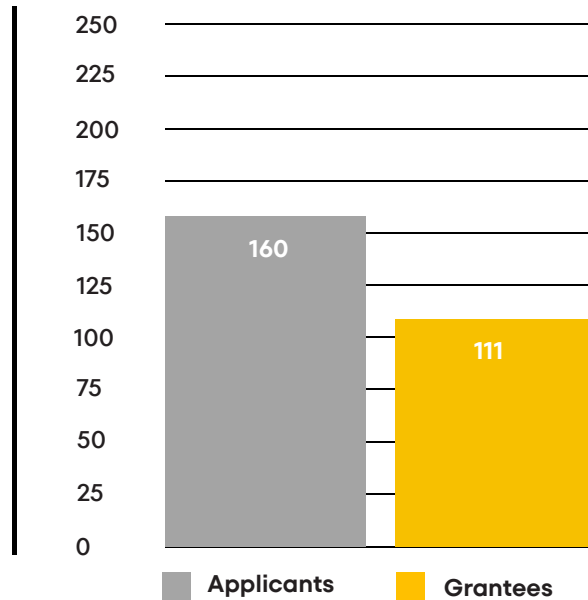

Kingston Chamber Music Festival brings renowned musicians together with young, rising artists to perform concerts at URI in addition to events at various settings during the year.

Providing arts access throughout Rhode Island

We ensured communities have access to arts and culture through our grants to organizations, which are open to any nonprofit in the state. Our grantees for this fiscal year include projects of varying sizes. Some of them engaged thousands of people such as the Arts Festival in Pawtucket or Levitt AMP Summer Concerts Series, Woonsocket, while others fully immersed less than a dozen people including the Veteran’s Anthology Creative Writing Project at the West Warwick Public Library and Esperanza Hope’s Bilingual Art Program, South Providence.

Also, we supported larger legacy cultural institutions, such as Trinity Rep. and the R.I. Philharmonic Orchestra and Music School, through our grants for operating support. However, we have been aware that operating support continues to be a challenge to obtain and a critical need for smaller, community-based cultural nonprofits. More than 70 percent of this program’s grantees have an average annual operating budget of less than $500,000. Some examples of those grantees were Community String Project, Bristol, Rhody Center for World Music and Dance, Coventry, and Newport Live.

FY24 Organizations Grants

Rhode Island Women's Choreography Project produces an annual public dance performance, which is a platform for emerging female-identifying and non-binary choreographers to present new work.

Impact

Our goals include continuously being present, engaged and responsive to the needs of the arts community at all levels, from grassroots to national programs. We maintain and grow networks that connect and empower people, students and organizations through events, workshops, webinars, get-togethers, site visits and meet ups.

In the Community

Mix and Mingle events, in partnership with Rhode Island Department of Health, provided an opportunity for creative connections and community building for artist, educators, organizations and health professionals.

On the Road continued our work of regular site visits to current and prospective grantees. The emphasis this year was on visiting folk and traditional arts organizations.

Self-Care Day was a gathering for teaching artists working in community education and health settings. The day offered space to rest, reset and recharge. Three artists facilitated sessions as well as unstructured time for informal connections.

During the event, Sidy Maiga, right, a Djembe master from Mali, gave a demonstration, led an interactive workshop on how to create a variety of sounds and rhythms on the drum individually and as a group.

Arts and Health

The R.I. Department of Health and RISCA work together on the Arts and Health Partnership to support, educate and amplify the integration of the arts into health and public health practice through policy, programming and community building.

Sales tax exemption for artistic works

Rhode Island is one of a few states that offers a sales tax exemption for artistic works in addition to being the only one that provides a statewide program.

In 2023, artists sold nearly 300,000 pieces of art totaling nearly $16.7 million in tax exempt art sales. Those same artists made an additionally $10.55 million in taxable sales.

Partnerships

Assets for Artists, a MASS MoCA program, offered trainings and workshops covering professional development.

Through a longstanding partnership with the Rhode Island Humanities, we collaborated on a number of programs and initiatives, including National Arts and Humanities Month. The theme in 2024 was Collective Responsibility. We co-hosted events and programs that explored how arts and culture create empathy and cohesion necessary for healthy communities.

National Endowment for the Arts and our General Assembly generously support us through appropriations. Thank you.

New England Foundation for the Arts' Harold Steward met with selected arts organizations and held a community panel discussion about the state of the arts on a day-long visit to Rhode Island.
